

Improving care

for people at the end of life

A series of public workshops to be held in autumn 2013

- Following the publication of More Care, Less Pathway, the report of the independent review into the Liverpool Care Pathway, a series of workshops is being held around England this autumn to engage with the public and professionals on proposals to improve end of life care.
- This is an opportunity for you to hear about our proposals and share your views and ideas about how care in the last days of life can be improved.
- The workshops have been convened by the Leadership Alliance for the Care of Dying People (LACDP – chaired by NHS England) and are being organised by Help the Hospices, Macmillan Cancer Support, Marie Curie Cancer Care and Sue Ryder, with support from the National Council for Palliative Care.
- The workshops are free to attend and all are welcome, although places are limited.
- Please see overleaf a schedule of the workshops (which will be held during October and November) and information on how to book.
